

Are energy costs reducing your profit?

Many care homes view reducing energy as a daunting task, as consumption is largely driven by their residents demand and weather.

However, there are several ways for care homes to reduce energy costs and they don't need to cost much whilst funding is competitive and readily available.

So what determines a good investment in energy reducing technologies and how can you be sure that return on your investment is fast and most importantly accurate?

We believe that any energy saving measure/technology that results in a return on investment within 2 years should be implemented, as energy rates for businesses are to set to continue rising. For example, a Voltage Optimiser is easily installed and provides instant savings, in some cases in less than a year. LED lighting is another opportunity that offers quick savings as the existing lighting systems can be easily upgraded at a lower cost. Products officially recognised by The Carbon Trust may even be entitled to free funding.

Only proven technologies should be considered and where possible the projected savings underwritten. Let's face it, we've all had sales reps promising unrealistic savings unable to underwrite their promises. Energy only contracts when implemented with energy demand reduction during specific periods can produce quick and significant savings.

To reduce your energy cost, CES Energy has produced a business guide to energy savings.
